A GEM .- Who wrote the following beautiful epitaph on an infant? It speaks to the heart: Beneath this stone, in sweet repose, Is laid a mother's dearest pride
A flower that scarce had waked

And light, and beauty, ere it died,
God in his wisdom has recalled
The precious boon his love had given;
And though the casket moulders here,
The gent is sparkling now in heaven.

WASHINGTON SENTINEL.

DAILY.

CITY OF WASHINGTON, SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 11, 1853.

MAIL ROBBER.—The Star gives the following nery around it as beautiful and grand.—Caraccount of the career of Gen. Hinton, a noted rollton (Ala.) Republican.

mail robber in the west:
"The public will doubtless recollect the es cape (by nominally forfeiting his bail) of Gen.
Otho Hinton, the great mail contractor of the west, as well as mail robber, whose depredations were discovered in the autumn of 1850. His mail robberies were, by long odds, more stupendous than those of every one else, so far detected in the perpetration of similar crimes in this country; covering a great many cases, and always involving the loss of very large "As far as the depredation branch of the department have been able to ascertain, he was in the habit of riding at night on the top of the coaches of the Ohio mail stage company, of which he was the general agent, as well as the individual immediately representing that great establishment in all its contracts with the department. Being thus doubly the department's confidential agent, as it were, he was permitted by the drivers to ride there; when, feigning to be sleeping, he would open the bag with a mail key secreted about him. His operations with the banking houses, and his having this extended route, enabled him to know when they had large sums in the mails, upon which his depredations were always committed. For a long time his detection seemed impossible, until the extravagances of his habits brought him under suspicion, after the department's de-tective agents became satisfied that the robberies were committed between, rather than in the offices along the route.

When first arrested, he escaped from the two agents who held him in custody in a fashionable hotel, in which the committing magistrate permitted him to remain for the night (before sending him to jail) in order that he might the easier communicate with his friends to get bail. He got off on that occasion by walking to and fro in his room, passed the shut but not locked door, until he had lulled the suspicions of the two keepers guarding him with their eyes wide open. When, suddenly he opened the door, boltopen. When, suddenly he opened the door, bolt-ed out of the room, and locked in the two bawling guards, a confederate having slipped a key in the lock outside, for him. He wandered in the woods for four days, robbing dairies of milk at night to sustain life. He then gave himself up, half famished. His bail was next fixed at fifteen thousand dollars, which Mr. Justice Mc-Lean finally reduced to ten thousand; and it was given. He then left the country, and was next heard of in Cuba; subsequently, on the Isthmus. From thence he went to California, where he was a servant in a hotel, when he was re-cognized by some one, and was again arrested through information lodged by agents of the Post Office Department. On the receipt of intelligence of his last arrest, the department instantly sent out a bench warrant for his trans-mission to Ohio, and the necessary papers to enable them to hold him safe. But on the arrival out of this authority, &c., it was found that the bird had again flown. He had been released by the courts of the new State under a writ of habeas corpus, the testimony at hand there not being judged sufficient to warrant him being held. He immediately left for the Sandwich Islands, where we understand he flourishes at present, in what capacity we know

AWFUL Scenes .- The condition of the " New World."-A correspondent of the New York Times, alluding to the condition of the New World, on board of which so many emigrants recently died, makes the startling statement: When the disease broke out in this vessel the medicines had been mostly destroyed by the violence of the storm-the chests and vials being all broken. Yet had they been saved, they would have been but a slight, if any protection against its ravages. What is a dose of oil or jalap, said the physician to a man who is caught as by a vice, whose blood is poisoned in an instant, and who dies in an hour? Nothing but a large dose of the best brandy, Cayenne pepper, or both, would have any effect The captain had two dozen bottles, and the physican two bottles of brandy, and this was the extent of their protection. Before the voyage was half made, the disease was left to its own course, and nothing was or could be done for the sick. In fact it was difficult to find any one to bury the dead. In one day eight dead bodies were brought from below and cast into the sea. It was on Sunday, in a terrible gale; the ship was rolling in the trough of the sea, and as the physician came upon deck, five dead bodies were rolling over the deck from side to side, and the sexton had gone for another. With only the reward of a glass of brandy one man performed this task of burying the dead. The place where these miserable 700 were suffering, was so dark that nothing could be seen without a light; the emigrants would not tell of a death, and in some instances three or four would continue in a berth for two or three days beside a corpse, and the discovery was only made at last by the nose of the sexton. The filth of this lower region was nearly knee deep, and to go through it, with the screams and groans of the suffering added to the offensive filth, gave you (as a minister on board remarked) a distinct idea of hell.

The filthiness of these emigrants, and their destitute condition, were described, but the recital would be too gross to repeat. It should, however, be made the subject of careful investigation by proper authorities. Talk of the horrors of a slave ship, when such horrors are at our very doors! What is the moral standard of these 700 souls after such a voyage? What is the moral stan-dard of those who engage in this traffic? Would it not be better to double the price of passage money, and limit the number of emigrants to one half of the present number to each

ANOTHER NATURAL BRIDGE.-We presume most of our readers are aware that Professor Tuomey describes in his geological report a natural bridge in Blount county, Alabama, which possesses features of grandeur and pictures of grandeur and grandeur turesqueness equal to the famous natural bridge of Virginia.

We have just been favored with a communication from Marion county, in this State, describing still another "natural bridge," near "Q! what Q?" the residence of our old acquaintance, Daniel Stanford, of that region, which the writer asserts is one of the "greatest natural curiosities now on the earth." We give the substance of the description: "It is ninety feet long, sixty high, from six to twelve wide, and from one and a half to four feet thick—having an arch at each end that cannot be surpassed by art. This bridge is thrown across a deep chasm, both sides of which are perpendicular rocks, extending up sixty feet from a dry bottom—no water below "Why, Jim Madison. I the bridge. Tall trees grow under it, amid for two hours, when Tom came in, and insisted whose branches the adventurer will find him that I should go home with him?" self in passing over the bridge, and it may be oudent represents this work of

From the Boston Morning Journal THE CHOLERA IN 1854 .- If there be any truth in the adage that "coming events cast their shadows before," how clearly is the warning now given to us, that the cholera next year will visit this country. During the last twelve months it has been gradually and slowly drawing its line of pestilence and death from east to west; we now find it at the very shores of the United States. By the papers, I am informed that the ship Constellation, which arrived at New York from Liverpool a few days since, lost one hundred passengers during her voyage, and while yet in New York waters she had many cases of the disease on board; seve-ral other ships that have lately arrived at these shores have reported the prevalence of the disease, and its fatality, more or less, on their pas-

How grateful ought we not to be that the first approach of this dire affliction has been at this season of the year, when for the next four or five months the natural effects of the climate will protect us from its ravages, and in which interval we have ample time to make an efficient preparation to repel its attacks, or, at least, to leave it little ground on which to get firm foothold. Prudence, care, and cleanline will ever do very much to avert the evils of the

What should be done now seems very plain. would recommend that the municipal authorities of all cities should at once establish in their respective districts a board of health not to inquire into, but with full power to act instantly in doing all such things as are likely to secure the better sanitary condition of the peo-ple, such as cleansing out old drains, removing filth and dirt wherever found, visiting the lowest abodes of poverty, and of vice no less, restricting with rigor the number of occupants of each dwelling, compelling all to white-wash and clean everything that is dirty, and let those who have not the means to do such things, be supplied, and the expense defrayed by the author ities. Let the public scavengers in each city be at least doubled. Activity like this must result in good; it would stir up the indolent and apathetic, and the cost to each place would be far less than if each city waited till the disease was fairly established.

When man does all in his power to avert any evil, he has nothing to reproach himself with, and he can, under such circumstances, with confidence seek the aid of the Almighty in his distress. To prostrate ourselves in prayer, and call upon the people to fast and pray to God for blessing, while we neglect "those things which are requisite and necessary as well for the body as the soul," seems to me very like asking Providence to remove from us an evil which we bring upon ourselves by our own negligence and inactivity, and such impotent requests are not likely, nor would it be wisdem that they should be granted to us.

I read hastily, a short time since, a notice in your paper of a letter dictated by Lord Palmerston to citizens of Edinburgh, in reply to a de sire that he would appoint a day for fasting and prayer, to stay the cholera; his lordship stated, if I remember correctly, something to this effect, that until man had done all it was in his power, it was little better than mockery to seek the aid of Providence, and that so long as filth remained, so long as decayed vegetable and other matter was allowed to pollute poison the air with pestilential gasses which robbed it of its primative vitality, so long would contagious diseases, at times, affect such places The great folk of Edinburgh seemed much annoyed at his lordship's truthful answer; he administered to them a very sharp rebuke, for the old town of Edinburgh much needs improvement in its sanitary state, or, at least, it did five years ago. Æsep's fable of "Hercules and the Carter" is applicable to us in our

every day experience.

My only motive in writing this letter, is to lraw the attention of wiser heads than mine to this highly important subject. In the hope that some practical efforts will be made im mediately, in all the populous cities of the land, having for their object the prevention, so far as possible, of the awful fatality of the cholera

Gen. Leslie Coombs on Story Telling. Few men have ever gone to Congress with more fun and popularity than the Hon. Leslie Coombs, of Kentucky. In the way of anecdotes, he is unequalled, while his mode of telling stories imparts a tone to them that no one can appreciate who has not made his acquain

Among the "characters" that Mr. Coombo knows "like a book," is old Major Luckey, whose taste for bragging amounts at times to the sublime. Whenever the major has a stranger in the neighborhood, he "opens wide and spreads himself," and with a success that leaves us nothing to desire. The following scene took place between the major and Col. Peters, "a late arrival from Illinois."

"Major, I understand from Gen. Coombs that shortly after the revolution you visited England, how did you like the jaunt?" "Capitally! I had not been in London five before Rex sent for me to play whist, and a devil of a time we had of it.' "Rex! what Rex?"

"Why, Rex the King-George the Third The game came off at Windsor Castle-Rex and I played against Billy Pitt and Edmund Burke-and resulted very comically." "How so?"

"As we were playing the last game, Rex said in rather a familiar manner, 'Major, I suppose you know George Washington, the Father of his country, 'Father be d —— d,' says he, 'he was a cursed rebel, and had I served him right, he would have been hung long ago.' This, of course, riled me, and to that degree, that I just drew back, and gave him a blow between the eyes, that felled him like a bullock. The next moment Pitt and Burke mounted me, and in less than ten minand on the next morning I set sail for America. Six weeks afterwards I landed at Washington.

"Q! what Q?"
"Why, that d—d old federalist, Quincy Adams. He wanted me to play ninepins with him, and I did so. Won two hundred dollars at two shillings a game, and then had a row."
"About what?"

"He wanted to pay me off in continental money, worth about a shilling a peck. I got angry, and knocked him into a spittoon. Whilst I still had him down, Jim came in and dragged not listen to it, and the consequence was that fell over the bannisters, and dropped about fifty feet. When I left, they were giving each other hell in the coal cellar. How it terminated I never could learn, as just then Martha ran in, and said I must accompany her up to Mount Vernon, to see George."

"What Martha do you mean?" "Martha Washington, wife to George, the old boy that gave Jessy to the Hessians. About here, Coombs said the stranger began to discover that he was "swallowing things." The next stage that came along he took passage in it for an adjacent town. The major, we believe, is still living, and still believes that the walloping he gave Louis the Eighteenth is the d—st best thing on record. [N. Y. Dutchman.

AUDACIOUS ATTEMPT AT HIGHWAY ROBBERY. Another audacious robbery was made in one of our most public streets last Thursday evening, at 10 o'clock. Mr. Jeremiah Peckham ing, at 10 o'clock. Mr. Jeromiah Peckham was knocked down on Eddy street, near Ship, by a man named Moses E. Clarke, and robbed of a small amount of change, all that he had in his pockets. The watch came up and ar rested the robber, who made a stout resistance, and attempted to stab one of the watchmen. Clarke was arraigned yesterday morning, and committed for examination on Monday next. Mr. Peckham was considerably injured .- Provi dence Journal.

The annexed clever parody (from the Knicker-bocker of July, 1844.) upon a popular poem of Longfellow's, sets forth the cosmopolitan charac-ter of an accidental crowd, such as would be arrested in five minutes by a dam across Broadway on any day in the week, and which would afford examples of nearly all that is extant in the human Yorker, Frenchman, Negro, Italian, Scotchman, English cockney, Welshman, German, Scottish-Highlander, Yankee, and Irishman:
